The Czech Republic's energy sector is characterized by a diverse mix of sources. The primary source of electricity in the country is coal, which has historically played a central role in its energy production. Coal-fired power plants continue to be a significant part of the energy landscape, despite global trends moving towards renewable sources.

2.5.2 Due to cross-border integration and the liberalisation of power prices, the Czech and German markets are integrated. The primary market for Czech electricity prices is Germany and its European Energy Exchange in Leipzig (EEX). There has historically been a strong correlation between power prices in the Czech and German markets.
